When to start DOGGIE DAYCARE ?

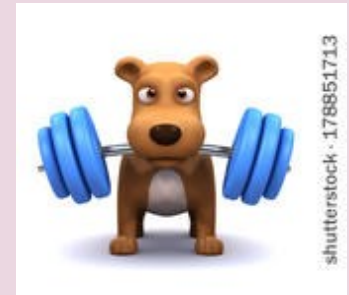

Starting daycare too soon can be detrimental for young dogs, especially puppies under the age of 4 to 6 months.

Here are the top reasons why you should wait:

Socialization. For a young puppy that has had limited social interactions, daycare can be overwhelming and intense. At daycare, puppies are quickly introduced to social norms among their peers and not always in a positive way. Frequent negative interactions can cause long-term effects on a dog's personality.

Exercise. Puppies need around 12 to 14 hours of sleep per day. Daycare offers so much stimulation that puppies have a hard time self-regulating for naps and down time. If your daycare doesn't require puppy naps, it means your dog could be wearing himself out and not in a good way. Overtired puppies are more susceptible to getting sick and injured.

Behavioral Issues. Frequently people use daycare as a means to combat behavioral issues such as separation anxiety, excessive barking or destructive behavior. Besides creating a pattern where your dog can never be home alone, forcing you to use daycare every time you run an errand, the source of the problems and the behavior will continue.

Cedarburg Pet Care would love to see your pup come to daycare, but after they have been given a solid foundation so they are ready for the daycare environment and can really enjoy it.
